The Journal of Urban Cultural Studies is open to scholarship that crosses the humanities and the social sciences while giving priority to the urban phenomenon, in order to better understand the culture(s) of cities. We are particularly interested in essays that achieve some balance between discussing an individual (or multiple) cultural/artistic product(s) in depth (film, literature, music...) and also using one of many social-science (geographical, anthropological, sociological...) urban approaches to investigate a given city.

VOLUME.ISSUE 1.1 (2013)

RESEARCH ARTICLES

Inaugural editorial: urban cultural studies—a manifesto [part 1]
Benjamin Fraser, The College of Charleston

Disaster, preemptive security, and urban space in the post-9/11 New York City of Cloverfield and The Visitor
Stephanie Simon, University of Amsterdam

Tokyo, gender, and mobility: tracking fictional characters on real monorails, trains, subways, and trams
Barbara E. Thornbury, Temple University

The harlot city?: prostitution in Hollywood, 1920-1940
AnneMarie Kooistra, Bethel University

Liberty at the merry-go-round: leisure, politics, and municipal authority on the Paseo del Prado in Madrid, 1760-1939
Eugenia Afinoguénova, Marquette University

Misuse of the monument: the art of parkour and the discursive limits of a disciplinary architecture
Matthew Lamb, Pennsylvania State University

SHORT-FORM ARTICLES

Unpicking the musical city: on Adam Krims’ Music and Urban Geography
David Beer, University of York

Félix Guattari and urban cultural studies
Stephen Vilaseca, Northern Illinois University

Cardboard towns / Città di cartone: an artist interview with Marco Bigliazzi
Benjamin Fraser, The College of Charleston

Societies of Occupy: scenes from occupied Pittsburgh
Keith Spencer, Carnegie Mellon University

Contact the editors at urbanculturalstudies@gmail.com